Early today only five of the dead had not been identified and it was said at the morgue some of the bodies are so ion will be well nigh impossible.

With a heavy load of passengers bonneward bound, the car, handled by Student Motorman J. C. Westover, latted as it reached the railway crossing. The conductor ran ahead, and, seeing a string of freight cars pushed by a switch engine approaching the intersection, signaled the motorman to wait until it had passed. The novice misunderstood the signal and turned on the power.

the power.

The car started down the slight incline leading to the railway tracks. When too late the motorman shut off the current and applied the brakes, but the car slid along until it stopped directly in the path of the oncoming train.

The leading freight car crashed into Union for Woman Suffrage of the Disthe street car, striking it squarely in the middle. The railroad tracks at the place where the accident occurred occupy a narrow street. As the car was cupy a narrow street. As the car was swept away from the crossing one end of it struck and demolished the front of the Delray station, which stood on one corner, and the other end tore out a part of a grocery store on the opposite side of the street.

Nearly 200 feet was traveled before the freight was brought to a stop, and along this distance terribly mangled bodies of dead and injured were strewn. Others, caught in the wreckage of the car, were not extricated until several hours after the crash.

The roof of the street car remained.

J. L. Smith Talks on Pageants.

Lecturing under the auspices of the Vashington Society of the Fine Arts at the National Museum last night, Joseph Lindon Smith of Boston discussed the five types of community, drama or pageants. The lecturer told of what was found on the roof of a freight car forty feet away.

The crews of the car and of the freight train were taken to police headquarters, and, after an investigation. Westover and the regular motorman, Richard Vallade, the efforts of the children.
